

The Goat Locker Returns to GTMO

Personnel attached to Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba held a ribbon cutting ceremony to celebrate the re-opening of the Goat Locker, Feb. 18.

The Goat Locker, a Moral Welfare and Recreation (MWR) managed facility, had been closed since Dec. 20 for renovations.

The Seabees repaired structural deficiencies and electrical problems in the facility, said Equipment Operator 2nd Class Eric Battease, from the naval station's Public Works Self Help shop. The windows were repaired, the roof was replaced, all off the wiring was replaced, some of the plumbing was replaced, security cameras were installed and new amenities such as speakers for the club's sound-system were installed.

Some of the challenges that the Seabees encountered with the renovation project included finance and recourses.

Because of the 'Continuing Resolution,' an emergency request for funding the project was submitted to pay for the required materials for the electrical, said Battease. The public works department authorized the materials to repair the windows and the wall.

The Seabees also replaced plaques that had been displayed on the club's wall and made sure the facility was ready for the opening ceremony.

The roof was replaced by a crew of ten Seabees assigned to Navy Mobile Construction Battalion 28 (NMCB 28), said Battease. MWR also provided two carpenters to assist with the various renovation projects.

The Goat Locker is a facility set aside for GTMO's senior enlisted population. Active duty, reserve and retired service members E-7 and above are eligible to use the club for social activities, training and meetings.

GTMO's PWD Completes Conservation Projects

Pictured is an example of one of the Low Flow Shower Heads that was installed by GTMO's Public Works Department to conserve potable water.

(GTMO), Cuba recently completed two energy conservation projects on base towards the SECNAV's goals.

NAVFAC Southeast GTMO installed low flow shower heads in all Department of Defense and contractor barracks at the naval station, said Art Torley the production division director for PWD GTMO. Low flow shower heads reduce the amount of water that is used without reducing the water pressure that the user feels.

"The base will save an estimated 8,213,000 gallons of water annually from the installation of the shower heads," said Torley. "From the reduction in water and sewer used, the base will save an estimated $172,462 annually."

Water conservation is a critical issue at GTMO due to the high cost of potable water production through reverse osmosis.

"There is no fresh water source on the base, so all potable water on the base is desalinated from sea water," said Torley. "In addition to the high production cost of the potable water we must also treat all of our waste water which is another high cost."

The base residents who are using the new shower-heads have reported positive experiences with the new units, said Torley.

The new shower head installation was part of a bigger energy savings project at GTMO that included replacing conventional street light bulbs with light-emitting diode (LED) bulbs.

SPEAK UP for Patient Safety

US Naval Hospital Guantanamo Bay, Cuba Public Affairs

The Naval Hospital at Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba will be bringing education and awareness to residents during the National Patient Safety Awareness Week from Mar. 6-12.

"The annual campaign, led by the National Patient Safety Foundation, encourages patients to take a role in preventing healthcare errors by becoming actively involved and informed patients on the healthcare team," said Sandra M. McMurray, Patient Safety manager at the Naval Hospital. "Throughout the week, members of the healthcare team will be available to answer any questions or concerns patients may have."

During the week, hospital personnel will encourage patients to use the acronym "SPEAK-UP" to help patients to become more involved in their healthcare. The acronym stands for:

- Speak up if you have questions or concerns.
- Pay attention to the care you are receiving.
- Educate yourself about your diagnosis, the medical test, and your treatment plan.
- Ask a trusted family member or friend to be your advocate.
- Know what medications you take and why you take them. Medication errors are the most common healthcare errors.
- Use a hospital, clinic, or other type of healthcare organization that has undergone a rigorous on-site evaluation against established quality and safety standard, such as The Joint Commission
- Participate in all decisions about your treatment. You are the center of the healthcare team.

"Some patients may be asked to complete a brief feedback form and rate their patient care," said McMurray. "Additional information will be provided during this week to include hand washing, preventing infection, preventing errors in your child's care, and knowing what medication you're prescribed."

Hospital staff will also have interactive games to test patients' knowledge.

Patient Safety Representatives will be located on the quarterdeck, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

"Patients are encouraged to speak up to anyone on our healthcare team when they are not clear about their care plan or when something doesn't feel right," said McMurray. "Who better to advocate for your health and wellness than you?"

The Power of 'Thank You'

MCC Bill Mesta
NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, Public Affairs

For those of us stationed at Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, it can be easy to get wrapped up in the things we don't have while serving and working on an isolated base. I believe it is important that each of us take a moment every now and then to reflect on all that we should be thankful for and the little things that the members of the GTMO community do to make our lives better every day.

Throughout my career, I have told my Sailors that although I am unable give them a pay raise for their hard work, I can always take the time to recognize their efforts with a sincere 'Thank You.'

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank some of the people and institutions that continuously make our time at GTMO better.

*Thank you SCSi for providing me the opportunity to e-mail my wife and to talk to on the phone each Wednesday and Sunday.

*Thank you Public Works Department for the hot shower I enjoyed after command physical training (PT) and the lighting to find my way to that shower.

*Thank you Moral Welfare and Recreation for providing the Cooper Field Sports Complex that was the site of the PT that required the subsequent hot shower.

*Thank you GTMO NEX for putting nice golf balls in the discount bin (I am a poor golfer on a budget and go through a lot of golf balls).

- *Thank you MCSFCO Marines for guarding the fence line.
 - *Thank you bus drivers who transport me to and from the Goat Locker so that I am able to enjoy a few adult beverages without being concerned with who is driving. These same drivers also make sure that the naval station's children make it to school safely.
 - *Thank you Phoenix Cable for providing me with the opportunity to watch the Super Bowl with all of its commercials (even though the Steelers lost).
 - *Thank you Security Department and Fire Department for keeping the GTMO community safe.
 - *Thank you Gold Hill Galley for serving the best galley food I have ever eaten.
 - *Thank you Post Office for getting my wife's Valentine's Day card to her in time. Let me tell ya', you saved my bacon on that one.
 - *Thank you to all those on base who are standing watch to-night so that I am able to go to sleep.
 - *Thank you to the JTF GTMO Troopers who undertake a trying mission with pride and professionalism that is unmatched.
 - *Thank you to all of the service members, DoD civilians, and contract employees on base who make all of the services we enjoy happen.
- Often it is easier to focus on negative situations we encounter daily than to recognize the value of the assistance we receive. The next time you encounter a member of the GTMO community providing exceptional customer service, make sure that you look them in the eye and let them know that you appreciate their hard work with a heart-felt 'thank you.' And while you are at it, make sure to let their supervisor know just how much you value the service you have just received.

MCPON Sends Supply Corps Birthday Message

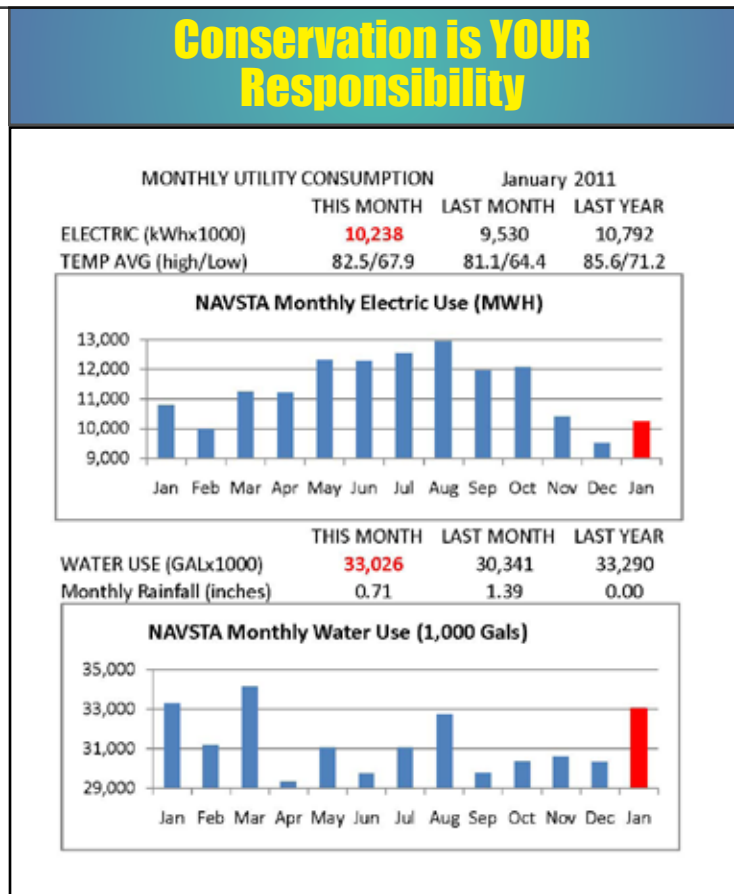

MCPON(SS/SW) Rick D. West

Shipmates,
For 216 years, our Navy Supply Corps has delivered sustained global logistics capabilities to the Navy and joint warfighter enabling our Navy to be the Global Force for Good at the tactical, operational and strategic level.

As one of the oldest staff corps in the Navy, the Supply Corps' rich and proud history began Feb. 23, 1795, when President George Washington appointed Tench Francis, a Philadelphia businessman, as the country's first Purveyor of Public Supplies. Francis unified a group of independent pursers under a single organization, which eventually became the Navy Supply Corps and since then, the supply corps community consisting of officers, Sailors and civilians, has given their dedication and steadfast support significantly contributing to the successes of our great Navy.

It is my belief that on board any command, morale rests in the hands of those in the Supply Department, whether you are delivering a much needed part, supplying items within the ship's store, or preparing the meals for our Warriors, your actions can single-handily set the tone for morale within your command and our Navy.

To the more than 3,500 active and Reserve component Supply Corps officers and the more than 19,000 supply community enlisted personnel including logistics specialists, ships' servicemen, and culinary specialists, and those Sailors and officers currently serving in harm's way, thank you for what you do every day and for your continued service and dedication to our nation and our Navy.

GTMO's First Responders Are

MCC Bill Mesta

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba Public Affairs

The Installation Training Team in coordination with emergency first responders and anti-terrorism force protection personnel conducted an active shooter drill at Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, Feb. 24.

The drill was conducted as part of "Solid Curtain – Citadel Shield 2011" to train and evaluate the naval station's ability to respond to security threats.

"The importance of having active shooter exercises is due to recent and past shooting incidents within the U.S.," said Chief Master-at-Arms Eduardo Perez, NS Guantanamo Bay security department. "It is evident that acts of violence utilizing guns are on the rise. Many of these acts may or may not be acts of terrorism; however, they must all be treated and acted upon accordingly."

The drill took place at building 760 where the base's Moral Welfare and Recreation (MWR) office and Personnel Support Detachment (PSD) are located, said Kevin Robarge, the installation's training officer.

The simulated shooter for the drill was Master-at-Arms 3rd Class Wyatt Howe, of the NS security department, who played the part of an armed, disgruntle service member brandishing a training weapon at the PSD customer service personnel. The assailant produced his training handgun and proceeded to simulate shooting three service members in the PSD office.

He then went upstairs to the MWR office and proceeded to simulate shooting two civilian employees.

Upon receiving a report of a simulated shooter situation via the base 911 system, emergency first responders from the naval stations security department and fire department responded to Admin Hill where building 760 is located and secured a parameter around the entire area.

Upon securing the area, Master-at-Arms assigned to the naval station moved in to apprehend the simulated threat. The simulated perpetrator was neutralized by security personnel inside the MWR office spaces.

Once the threat was neutralized, medical and fire department personnel were evaluated on their ability to triage, treat and transport simulated casualties.

Based on the training scenario, four people, including the suspected shooter were killed during the incident. One person was seriously injured and was transported to the hospital for simulated treatment.

The first responders who participated in this exercise received no coaching prior to the drill so that trainers would be able to evaluate their decision making skills, said Lt. Travis Adams, the naval station's security officer.

"The drill was conducted in assessment mode, in real-time," said Adams. "The first responders were required to think 'what would I do' if this were a real situation."

"The GTMO team performed at a very high level during this exercise," said Robarge. "The lessons the base learned from this drill will be invaluable in case the naval station ever has respond to a real-life active shooter situation."

members can begin to solve leadership issues that we are facing,” said Senior Chief Quartermaster Paul Bischoff, the naval station’s Port Operations Leading Chief Petty Officer. “It is a place where we are able to share our leadership challenges and successes at the junior enlisted Sailor level.”

The Goat Locker is used by the Chief Petty Officers Association (CPOA) each first and third Friday of the month to hold its meetings at 4 pm.

The Chief Petty Officers Association is a social networking organization for senior enlisted service members at GTMO which is open to active duty, reserve, and retired senior enlisted leadership E-7 to E-9 from all services around the base.

“We get together and it is a good forum for us to talk about issues that affect our commands,” said Chief Master-at-Arms James L. Lloyd, attached to Naval Station Guantanamo Bay (GTMO) Security. “We talk about professional challenges and how we can solve these issues within the Chief’s Mess. We also figure out how we can affect the base around us. It also gives us the ability to have fun as a group.”

“The CPOA is a collection of various [Chiefs] messes from across an entire base,” said Bischoff. “It allows us to even more cohesively than just one unit, one ship or one command. We get together cross-functionally to get information out to make sure that we are leading our people with the same information across the board.”

GTMO’s CPOA participates in a wide variety of community activities including the annual Chief’s Birthday Triathlon on Apr. 2, an annual CPOA scholarship for a W.T. Sampson High school senior, and various base beautification projects.

PWD GTMO replaced half of the street light bulbs on base, the high bay lights at the air field hanger and those at the youth center, said Torley. The new LED street lights will use up to one-half of the electricity consumed by traditional bulbs at an annual base savings of $161,283.

Both projects were funded by the Commander Navy Region Southeast’s “Fast Payback Program” which focuses on projects that will pay for themselves with energy savings in three years.

GTMO's Red Cross Moves to Center Bargo

MCC Bill Mesta

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, Public Affairs

The Guantanamo Bay, Cuba chapter of the American Red Cross moved into its new facility Feb. 11.

The Red Cross was relocated to Building 1208 in the Center Bargo neighborhood to provide a better facility for their personnel.

"The new facility will provide a convenient location for GTMO's Red Cross volunteers to meet, said Sharon Coganow," the GTMO Red Cross program manager. "The program currently has approximately 150 volunteers comprised of service members, dependents, and civilian employees from around the naval station. The volunteers work on various projects such as the Wounded Warrior program, fundraising fun-runs, and the Public Works nursery."

Inbound and outbound American Red Cross messages will be processed at the new facility to notify service members about a crisis in their family. The message system is typically used to contact service members of family emergencies such as a life threatening illness or death.

Sometimes the Red Cross will process messages concerning financial situations, said Coganow. The message could be detailing a situation in which a spouse has encountered a critical financial setback.

There have been numerous Red Cross messages processed during the course of our move with no interruption to service, said Coganow.

To help the system work more efficiently, Coganow said those who need to use the message system to contact someone in a time of crisis, need to know the service member's legal name, military rank, last four digits of their social security number, date of birth, and branch of service and their assigned military unit.

If you are interested in the services offered by GTMO's Red Cross from their new facility, call 2511 or 2512.
